Who Am I, Who Are You? Gender matters

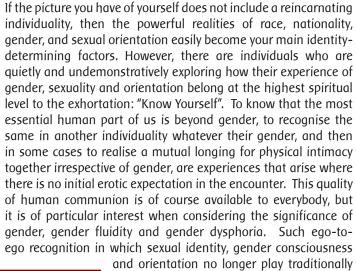

By Andrew Wolpert

onversations with students at the Priests Seminar in Stuttgart some years ago made me aware of a world of courageous, unconventional, exploratory personal experience. That immediately resonated with the already obvious reality that the outer social, political, economic, academic, and professional paradigms and conventional structures we have inherited are not always adequate for life today. It is not the publicly assertive and politicised expressions of gender that concern me here, but rather how increasing numbers of not only young people come to terms with feeling homeless in their bodies and unconventional in their behaviour.

There is a constant stream of new publications in mainstream popular literature and academia in the field of gender studies, and also several books written from an anthroposophical perspective. Teachers in Waldorf schools encounter these realities in the classroom and from parents, priests in the Christian Community today face questions from same-sex partners in connection with the Sacrament of Marriage, and no one interested in biography work, karma and reincarnation, and the creative potential of speech can ignore this topic. Yet some of us are uncomfortable with this subject. It is not the unavoidable high profile of gender issues in the wider world that should challenge us as anthroposophists to be interested in this, but much more the fact that spiritual science has so much to contribute to this topic.

and orientation no longer play traditionally determining roles, affirms the universally human, not just beyond ethnicity, religion and culture, but also beyond gender.

The qualities of feminine and masculine are complementary and harmonising cosmic archetypes. They come to expression in the configuration of our astral and etheric bodies, and also, usually (but by no means always) more or less unambiguously as female or male in our physical bodies. The spirit, the imperishable reincarnating individual, the higher ego, has no gender or sexual characteristics. The everyday ego, the personality, is of course influenced by the bodily female-male reality, by the feminine and masculine astral and etheric realities. by the experience of sexual orientation, and by biographical events, that may be karmic. Our bodies, our particular soul configuration and sexual orientation are mostly pre-birth karmic choices and individually biographical.

Lucas Cranach the Elder (1472-1553), Adam and Eve

It has been "convenient" and also for a time maybe true that femininity aligned with a female body and masculinity aligned with a male body. The unavoidable reality now is that this (still widely perceived and also experienced as) "normal" exclusive binary alignment is no longer unquestionably universally true or unquestionably universally convenient. Even the notion of a spectrum on which we each have our particular place between these two poles is being replaced by the image of a multi-dimensional landscape where self-defining gender identity is not constant or consistent, and is configured on the basis of different and changing factors. The concepts of fluidity, orientation and dysphoria have now expanded to a wonderful if also slightly bewildering choice of identifying labels, conveniently abbreviated as LGBT+. In an unexpected way this proliferation attests to a kind of individual refusal to conform to already existing categories and the wish to independently describe identity.

The panorama of our unfinished human evolution, that is part of spiritual science, offers a paradigm that helps to make sense of all this. Are gender dysphoria and gender fluidity, non-heterosexual orientations, and non-binary identity early signs of an evolutionary shift? These queer phenomena (queer, like black, has been positively reclaimed with pride) in some cases indicate that there are individuals already now experiencing intimations of a future condition. We are now between an original androgyny and a future metasexual creativity connected with speech and the larynx, when sexual reproduction as we now know it will no longer be part of our evolution, and when sexuality and gender will have a different significance. The relationship between sexual procreation and the creative word is central to this.

The honing of our speech, the scope we have in language to overcome selfishness, the striving not just to mean what we say but also to say what we mean, the art of creative speech given by Rudolf Steiner and Marie Steiner are all opportunities that we already now have to practise the creative Logos potential. This striving of my everyday self to be true to my higher self and even also to my true self in how I speak is an aspect of the quest for congruence between who I am and how I behave. It is a Grail vision in which the distinction between form and content will be overcome. In the myriad of the apparent gender chaos around us there glimmers and even shines in some biographies the essence of this same noble striving.

Can we imagine that these cosmic archetypes of masculine and feminine are waiting to be transformed in our striving to become human? All this pain, pleasure, guilt, anguish, pride, shame, joy, doubt, and longing (all experienced by "normal" heterosexual, cis individuals as well) are unavoidable aspects of the struggle to glimpse, discover and maybe eventually achieve our true identity and human potential. Then the earthly realities of female and male and the cosmic realities of feminine and masculine will have served their tasks and be transformed. If this is so, then our own "little" experiences of gender dysphoria and gender fluidity become something that is not so little at all.

Can we suspend the inclination to judge how people live with the social and personal realities of gender and sexuality? Can we first just observe with the wish to understand these phenomena in the context of spiritual science, even when confronted with what might seem to be nothing more than the pursuit of sexual gratification?

Regrettably, in our anyway obsessively sexualised culture and additionally aggressive politically-correct sexual politics, free expression is not always possible. This whole field been arrogated by mainstream academia, medical practice and fashionable social attitudes based on ideologies and fear. The politicised and dogmatic attitudes are as intimidating and stifling as the reactionary dogma of traditional "heteronormativity", a term itself laden with attitude. The polarising effect of this, particularly in education and on young children, is harmful. How can we prepare children for an unprejudiced understanding of our diverse human and social realities without burdening them with age-inappropriate material?

The honing of our speech, the scope we have in language to overcome selfishness, the striving not just to mean what we say but also to say what we mean, the art of creative speech given by Rudolf Steiner and Marie Steiner are all opportunities that we already now have to practise the creative Logos potential.

This is of particular concern when young children exhibit symptoms of what is understood to be gender dysphoria. If their parents rely on the advice of doctors who might be in thrall to the current gender-political ideology, an irreversible course of pubertal hormone blockers might be prescribed before the true nature of the symptoms have a chance to show themselves. I am well aware that these assertions do not conform to what is politically correct.

This whole field presents awakening challenges, to observe impartially, to listen open-mindedly, to recognise clearly, to understand without prejudice, to be able to describe accurately and courageously without fear of being dissed, and to realise that it is arrogant to presume to approve, disapprove, censure, or endorse.

Dear Editor,

I love your publication - great format and great articles.

I felt compelled to comment on the article about Gender with Lisa Romero [by Sarah Hearn, Sept. 2019 Newsletter]. It mentions body, soul, and spirit and then refers to body as the physical. This can be misleading. Body (soma) means a 3-fold, as does soul and spirit thereby making the human's potential 9-fold. The bodies are physical, etheric, and astral, and sometimes Steiner mentions a 'body' for the Ego. The physical is one gender while the etheric is the other gender. The astral is both. The Ego is neither. In so far as the astral is the base for the soul, the soul is both. But in general, one can say the soul is neither. And, then the spirit is neither.

It is also important to know when the separation of the sexes occurred and when it will end. It began with the withdrawal of the moon during Lemurian Epoch. By bringing back moon rocks, we have begun the reuniting process with the moon that will happen around 8000 AD according to Steiner. The gender issues of today can be seen in the light of a preparation for the return of the moon. Even before the moon returns, sexual procreation will have ended - around 5700 AD. Androgyny will return. Spiritual beings are present with us now to help us prepare for these cosmic future events.

With much warmth to Portland, Andrew Linnell

Dear Andrew,

Thanks for your interest in this topic and article. I'm glad for the opportunity to offer some context and explanation for the article in question. The article was written with an eye towards accessibility to a wide audience for the summer edition of Lilipoh magazine (June 2019) and re-publishing in the branch newsletter was subsequently requested a couple of months later. The article was specifically written to encourage young people ages 16 and up to attend an event that took place this summer hosted by the Y Project, entitled, What's Freedom Got to Do with lt - Exploring Identity, Sexuality, and Gender. For young adults 16-26, the Y Project, carried by a volunteer-run organization working out of anthroposophy (Developing the Self Developing the World visit www.developingtheself.org for more details) offers mentors. artistic programs, health services, vocational apprenticeships, and events. When speaking to young people and to wider audiences in general, I do my best to use accessible language and when possible and relevant, to use the language that young people themselves are accustomed to using. Defining or mentioning the fourfold (or 9-fold) human being and/or specifically 'the etheric body' by name was not necessary for the purposes or scope of the article and since 99% of the general (even alternative/Waldorf) population isn't familiar with the word or concept, I usually work to avoid language of this kind for such a public readership. It may be of interest to note that the article's mention of the physical body "and its corresponding social conditionings" is a gentle reference to the many social habits and patterns of the human being, be them religious, cultural, familial, gender, that live in the etheric body.

The words 'soul' and 'spirit' have wider usage and are familiar to a wider population of readers. There is another lesser-known term used in the article "consciousness soul." I included this phrase because it was very pertinent to the essential theme of the article (freedom, and the development of individual capacities) and required only a short definition for the purposes of the article, for those that might be more or less unfamiliar. For such a wide audience there was not a need or use in mentioning past or future epochs as understood from an anthroposophical perspective - although they are, of course, essential to gaining a larger spiritual-scientific understanding of the past and future evolution of the sexes, as well as to provide greater context and insight into the gender issues of our times, as you mentioned. If I or anyone else from our team were asked to write a piece for an exclusively anthroposophical audience then it would be a very different article that would be offered. I've included the most relevant paragraph below from the article for anyone for whom that is useful to revisit.

Thanks again, Andrew, for engaging in these questions and themes.

Sincerely, Sarah Hearn

Through being born into a predominately male or female body, we ourselves are living with a one-sided human experience and endure social conditioning about how we should act according to prescribed gender roles. The physical body and its corresponding social conditions are a transient part of the human being, whereas the essential part lives beyond conditioning and one-sided biological processes. It is the essential part of the human being that leads us away from materialism and connects us with the truth of who we are. The human being has a body, a soul and a spirit. So while the physical body has a sex, the soul and the spirit are neither male nor female.

The things enacted here on Earth,

Through love, friendship,
and the intimate understanding of one another;

These are the building stones of temples
being erected in the regions of the Spirit.

For those convinced of this truth,
It should be an uplifting feeling to know

That the ties binding soul to soul

Are the basis for Eternal Being.

- Rudolf Steiner

A Fond Memory of Beth Wieting

By Dr. Craig Thom

I first met Beth as a 19 year old student at Reed College. My girlfriend invited me to play at Beth's gathering where students would play piano for each other. Later that year, I played in a student concert and Beth seemed to be the only person in the hall who understood that I had had a profound experience. It was just a glance. Later I became Beth's student. She was such a sensitive piano teacher that I made more progress in two years than I had in the previous ten. She taught me how to listen.

She spoke only once about Anthroposophy until I joined the study group at Mart and Ella Pool's house in 1981 where I had been working on weekends and summers in their biodynamic garden. After that we spent much time together in personal conversations and study groups, and my interest in Anthroposophy grew.

My relationship with Beth continued through my time in Camphill, my early married life (Beth is Godmother to our daughter Olivia) and has woven - sometimes near and sometimes far - through the decades since then. When visiting Beth in the last months of her life I had opportunity to reflect with gratitude on how she enriched my life in so many ways.

Calendar of the Soul

Week 19

Mysteriously in memory to enfold What was received of late; This be my striving's further quest. In growing stronger it shall waken Forces of my own within And, evolving, give me to myself.

Week 20

Thus only do I feel my very being Which, far from world existence, Would on its own itself extinguish, And building on its ground alone Would bring but death upon itself.

Week 21

I feel unwonted power spring to fruit In gaining strength it grants my Self to me. The seed I sense maturing, And premonition, light-filled, weaving At my selfhood's might within.

Week 22

The light from world-wide spaces Lives powerfully on within. It turns to light of soul And shines into the Spirit depths The fruits to liberate, which let The Self of man from Self of worlds Mature in time's continuing flow.

WALDORF 100: COURAGE

TRUST WALK Pablo Feliz

Phase 1

Upon learning that Cedarwood faculty and staff would be creating chalk pastel dragons as part of their pre-school inservice, we at The Art Hall got in to gear and prepared the work for installation to greet the students on opening day, September 4! (Many thanks, Jeremy!) Two people worked together on each of the sixteen pieces which now fill the space with color and wonder. Please arrange for a tour if interested.

Phase II

This will occur as originally announced and will incorporate the work of many artists, both local and from around the country, who have contributed their pieces and accompanying statements on COURAGE. The opening reception will take place at The Art Hall during Portland's First Thursday, October 3, 5:00 – 8:00 PM. Sue Levine, Cedarwood's Head of School, will facilitate a discussion on the theme. All are welcome!

Please come, participate, share your story, enjoy the evening's bounty, meet new folks and perhaps purchase a piece of art. As usual, proceeds will be shared between the artist and The Art Hall, with the gallery's portion going toward future improvements to the space.

Questions? Please contact Robin: robin@robinlieberman.net or 503-222-1192. The exhibit will continue through November.

News from Pacific Eurythmy

Pacific Eurythmy is starting another First Year!

We have again a small, but dedicated group who is ready to dive deeply into the world and movements of Eurythmy. Carrie Mass and Jolanda Frischknecht are leading the class through the beginning stages and basic elements of Eurythmy. We will share the fruits of our work at the end of each the term.

Please join us for the open community classes on Monday nights. There is study with Don Marquiss and speech with Daniel Stokes among others. And look for the art classes on Saturday. We will start with painting with Cheri Munski.

There is always room to join us!

In lecture one of the "Study of Man" Rudolf Steiner explains "The task of education conceived in the spiritual sense is to bring the Soul-Spirit into harmony with the Life-Body....The child only begins to breath in the right sense of the word when he has left the mother-body.... As we breath in, we are continually pressing cerebrospinal fluid into the brain: and, as we breath out, we press it back again into the body....We may say that breathing is the most important mediator between the outer physical world and the human being who is entering it."

In my 30 years experience of practicing Advanced CranioSacral Therapy (CST), I have found that most of us need help in resolving imbalances that originate from birth, our entry into the breathing experience. CST is one of the few modalities that I am aware of that has the potential to normalize our breathing by assisting self correction (Perhaps playing a part in a proper "education", assisting the harmonizing of the Soul-Spirit and the Life-Body). ~ Benjamin Bell

If you have a friend or family member interested in CST, bring them along to your first session for a free session. (Please be sure to reserve two consecutive appointment time slots, one for each of you.)

Spirit-led Community: Healing the Impact of Technology

Portland Waldorf School Music Room 2300 SE Harrison St Milwaukie, OR 97222 ($15.00 suggested donation):

Lisa Romero

With our outer lives increasingly permeated by technology, we now face the effects that technology brings to our inner lives, as well as its artificial influence on the development of our thinking, feeling, and willing. Technology is forming the future of our communities and extending its pervasive influence into our inner capacities as community members. Discovering how unfree we actually are has always been one of the necessary steps in awakening the inner development path. The foundations of our inner freedom, as well as our inner unfreedom, are greatly influenced during the years of child development. Our patterns of thinking, feeling, and willing are all influenced directly by the community in which we grow up.

"We must be prepared, as a collective humanity, with capacities and inner strengths enabling us to freely choose the form of community life that we determine to be needed for the future of humanity. We need to establish communities that are dedicated to human freedom—communities in which the health of the community, the education of the child, and social life are imbued with impulses supportive of the cultivation of human freedom."—Lisa Romero

Lisa will introduce spiritually healthy guidelines for lessening negative influences of technology on inner life. Through providing an understanding of the foundations of inner health laid in childhood, as well as the path of inner development that can be consciously engaged with as adults, a path to a new community life can lead us into a future that maintains and supports the evolving human spirit. Social Understanding, Gender, & Sexuality in the Light of Waldorf Education

A CONFERENCE OPEN TO EVERYONE With Lisa Romero and colleagues

October 11-13, 2019 at Cedarwood Waldorf School

3030 SW 2nd Avenue, Portland OR

$195.00 $175.00 earlybird/$150.00 earlybird for sponsors & students (By 9-20-19) workstudy available

This workshop addresses gender differences and similarities that both limit or free us, and the contribution and struggles of the changing social structures around gender and sexuality affecting us all. It helps bring understanding of how to support the child/adolescent in these times, and addresses the questions and challenges that adults experience. We explore the anthroposophic understanding of being more than male and female, how to express evolving pictures of gender and sexuality to students in primary and secondary school, and the common struggles experienced during childhood, adolescence and into adulthood. Supporting this aspect of health and wellbeing of each child's relationship to gender and sexuality results in greater resilience and confidence in their growing relationship to the wider community. If there is sufficient interest, this workshop can set the stage for future weeklong retreats with Lisa In Portland.

LISA ROMERO is an author and adult educator delivering education enriched with anthroposophy for over 20 years. Her 6 books include 'Developing the Self,' written after years of working with Waldorf teachers to support their inner work and pedagogical understanding of child development, 'Sex Education and the Spirit, written to support an understanding of our communal responsibility for the healthy development of gender and sexuality within society, 'Spirit-led Community,' which introduces healthy guidelines for lessening the negative influence of technology on the inner life. Lisa has been lecturer of Health & Nutrition and Male/Female studies at Sydney Rudolf Steiner College, where she continues to give lectures on inner development. Since 1999 she has presented on gender, sexuality and spiritual life. She works with Waldorf schools as part of their health and wellbeing curriculum, working directly with students, teachers and parents. Lisa has contributed to and is an adviser on the Health and Personal Development for the Australian Steiner Curriculum Framework. She has developed training courses, and facilitates professional development on this subject for teachers and health professionals. QUESTIONS/REGISTRATION: TGKLEIN@AOL.COM was founded in 1922 with the help of Rudolf Steiner, Austrian educator and esotericist. The Christian Community recognizes Christ's deed of life and death as the pivotal renewal in humanity's history. The church is centered around the seven sacraments in their renewed form.

There is no formal written dogma. Members are encouraged to form independent judgements in religious matters. Each priest has the freedom to teach anything which does not contradict the content of the sacraments. As a result, the teachings are rich, varied and evolving and can incorporate such ideas as reincarnation and karma, a truly cosmic conception of Christ, and the role of spiritual beings at all levels of existence.

REVEREND SANFORD MILLER

of The Christian Community in Sacramento, received his B.A. from the University of California at Santa Barbara in religious studies in 1972, with an emphasis on Eastern religion. He has also been a student of the work of Rudolf Steiner since 1972. He has lived and worked in the Camphill movement in Scotland with mentally handicapped adults for six years before training for the priesthood in The Christian Community. He was ordained in 1982 and has worked in Pforzheim, Germany, Boston and for more than a decade now in Sacramento, CA.
